

Matt leads Bird Construction's Industrial group for Ontario and Eastern Canada, the group responsible for all of Bird's nuclear-sector initiatives. Matt is an engineer by training and has over a decade of experience working for Bird. Matt started his career in Western Canada, working on large-scale industrial projects in Alberta and BC that included leading projects in excess of $200M. Matt relocated to Ontario to lead Bird's industrial program in Eastern Canada, growing it to a business that generates annual revenue in excess of $100M and building a presence in the nuclear sector, where the majority of this work takes place.

In Matt's role leading the Industrial group for Ontario and Eastern Canada, he is responsible for strategic planning, accounting/finance, human resources, risk management, client relations, and overall safety leadership.

Matt brings knowledge and experience from the nuclear sector and other heavy industrial sectors which allows him to provide valuable input on projects and effectively incorporate best practice. Leadership in safety is particularly important to Matt and an area he works collaboratively to advance within the industrial sector.
