

Nikou Morshedi

I am committed to the position and dedicated to driving positive change. My campaign message is rooted in the principles of clean energy, innovative engineering, and collaboration with indigenous communities. Together, we can achieve a brighter, more sustainable world. I bring to this campaign the strength of experience, as my company, Aversan, has obtained the prestigious SCAMSC certificate, demonstrating our commitment to excellence and sustainable practices. My passion lies in advancing clean energy solutions and harnessing cutting-edge engineering to tackle the pressing challenges of our time. I envision a future where clean energy adoption and the use of Instrumentation and Control (I&C) technology lead us towards a more sustainable and prosperous tomorrow. But it doesn't stop there. I'm not just a female business leader; I'm a passionate advocate for change. I've volunteered for data analysis to support a study that explored the use of Indigenous storytelling in the planning and teaching of mathematical content. This experience has given me unique insights into the power of inclusivity and the value of indigenous perspectives. A core pillar of my campaign is the unwavering commitment to building strong partnerships with indigenous communities. I deeply appreciate the unique perspectives and cultural contributions they bring to the table. By respecting and engaging indigenous voices, we can work hand in hand towards a shared vision of a brighter, more sustainable world. I firmly believe that our combined efforts can leave a lasting impact. With a proven track record of effective leadership, I am ready to advocate for and implement concrete solutions that serve the interests of the membership and strengthen the OCNI Board. I'm excited to bring these goals to the board and collaborate with fellow members to foster positive change, champion inclusivity, and lead the transformation toward a more sustainable future.
